The construction, mediation, and representation of urban spaces and places constitutes a key element in a variety of fields such as literature, culture, history, sociology, and politics. Against this background, the Fifth American Studies Leipzig Graduate Conference “Urban America: Mediating City Space as Place” seeks to explore the cultural, social, and political production of spatial realms and places in an interdisciplinary framework. As a platform to discuss the complex representations of urban spaces and places, our conference invites all interested graduate students and professionals in the field of urban research.
